duties when required to act as Superintendent of the Deseret News. Have also been a Home Missionary in the Salt Lake Stake of Zion and President of the 23rd Quorum of Seventies. Am a happy husband of two wives and the father of thirteen children, ten of whom are living."

Shortly after writing the above, Mr. Lambert severed connections with the Deseret News and leased the Paper Mill in Big Cottonwood Canyon. On April 1, 1893, the mill burned without insurance, leaving him with a stock of unsalable paper on hand. Although that was a period of great depression, he started again and established the Lambert Paper Co., importing paper from the East. This business grew and thrived. In 1907 he took a trip to Europe, traveling extensively in England and on the continent. Soon after his return he suffered a stroke and from then on his health was broken. He went to California a number of times to recuperate, with little results. He spent much of his time as guide on the Temple Block and as an ordinance worker in the Salt Lake Temple.

During his last years and up to the very day of his death, he devoted his whole time and strength to putting a bill through congress helping the men to obtain a pension for their services in the Black Hawk War. He had a marvelous memory for names and faces and having ever once met a person never forgot either his name or his face. The very night before he died he dictated letters to many, with help and instructions in making out their pension papers. He died June 12, 1917, at the age of 69.

His was not a very long life but an exceedingly full one. He lived always for others, eliminating as far as possible any thoughts or desires for himself.
